Smoking ban starts Sunday

NEW YORK. The smoking ban on LIRR and Metro-North platforms begins this Sunday. Smoking is now prohibited on all outdoor railroad platforms, ticketing and boarding areas and, to help get the word out, celebs like Joe Namath will remind riders via public service announcements not to light up while they wait for their train. All riders will be expected to comply with the new law; however, as part of the grace period, MTA police will issue warnings rather than summonses. The law does not apply to Metro-North stations in Connecticut. ● METRO/CB

Police bust knockoff operation worth $3.5M

- Purses sold made to look like Tory Burch and Michael Kors originals
- Councilwoman says NYC needs stronger deterrent to counterfeit buyers

It's going to be thousands of times harder to find a fake bag in Chinatown. Thousands of fake purses and wallets were seized Wednesday when police uncovered an alleged international counterfeit operation in Chelsea.

The NYPD Trademark Infringement Unit raided "La La Fashion" after a two-month investigation and found hoards of knockoff luxury goods meant to look like Tory Burch and Michael Kors designs.

All together, the counterfeit contraband had an estimated street value of

One of the knockoffs

$3.5 million, police said.

The 28th Street operation sold the goods through their website, www.LaLaFashion.net, and to retailers in Chinatown and Canal Street, according to police.

The thousands of leather accessories were shipped from China to New York City streets, according to the investigation, aided by U.S. Immigration & Customs Enforcement agents.

Six members of the ring have been arrested and charged with first-degree trademark counterfeiting.

The pervasive counterfeit culture of Canal Street has long been the subject of Councilwoman Margaret Chin's ire.

Earlier this year, Chin proposed legislation that would make the purchase of a counterfeit good a crime in itself. The maximum punishment would be a $1,000 fine or up to one year in jail.

"We need to cut the demand for these items by making it a crime to buy counterfeit trademarked goods," Chin said.

"We need to create a strong deterrent and we need to counter the idea that counterfeiting is a victimless crime," she added.

Veterans Day

BRIAN KIRWAN/EPSTEIN/RETNA

► Kevin Kirwan and his wife, Tuli Roy-Kirwan, are expecting their first child in January.

From Navy to the work force

► In August, Metro interviewed a veteran desperately seeking a job ► Now, he's reporting to JPMorgan Chase

This summer, Metro wrote about a New York City veteran who, despite 14 years serving in the Navy, could not find a job once he returned home to Queens.

Many Metro readers responded to the piece, writing with words of encouragement and even offers to hire Kevin Kirwan.

But this Veteran's Day, Metro has positive news to report: Kirwan, 35, began a job as a loan modification supervisor with JPMorgan Chase in September. The job offer came just in time; his first child is due in January.

"Work is fantastic!" Kirwan told Metro. "I have a team of nine people, and they are a pleasure to work with."

It's no wonder he's ecstatic to be working, after fruitless months of applying to more than 200 jobs, despite international experience and a bachelor's degree in justice administration.

JPMorgan Chase is one of 11 companies so far, like AT&T and Verizon, with a goal of hiring 100,000 veterans by 2020.

As Metro reported, veterans often have a tough time translating their war skills into the civilian workplace.

But vets like Kevin are "disciplined and team players," said JPMorgan Chase's Maureen Casey.

On Thursday, the Senate passed a bill that offers tax credits to employers who hire vets. "The unemployment rate among our veterans is a crisis," New York Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand said.

Once home, veterans face a 'perfect storm'

American soldiers face bullets and worse during war, but when they come home they often encounter a whole new set of obstacles.

Returning veterans from Afghanistan and Iraq face a "perfect storm" in New York — a terrible job market, housing shelters "busting at the seams" and a public unfamiliar with what they've been through, said Dr. Yves Ades, chief operating officer of Services for the UnderServed.

Homelessness confronts many vets adjusting to civilian life, said Councilman Mathieu Eugene, speaking at a city hearing this week on how to address the problem of veteran homelessness.

Multiple deployments in war are particularly tough,

Ades said.

"There's a lot of ruptures, with family, with friends, with employment," he said. "I don't think we as normal citizens understand the burden that exists, and how difficult it is." ● METRO/AB

NEW YORK. New York's annual Veterans Day Parade takes place Friday. The parade begins sharply at 11 a.m., marching up Fifth Avenue from 23rd Street and ends at Central Park South. The opening ceremony will be at Madison Square Park, from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., where veterans will play "Taps" and lay a wreath at the park. The parade has been marching in New York for more than 90 years.

Oops! Gov. gaffe may sink him

- Presidential hopeful can't seem to remember agency he wants to cut
- Not good after other weird speech

► Perry is shooting himself in the foot.

Let's admit it: Barack Obama doesn't have Southern charm. He possesses a great intellect and is a phenomenal public speaker, but people don't perceive him as warm. George H.W. Bush, too, lacked that personable nature. That, at least in part, is why the folksy Bill Clinton defeated him.

Rick Perry was trying to do a Bill Clinton. With his down-to-earth persona he'd win over voters — not just from Obama, but in this primary season primarily from Mitt Romney. Romney, like Obama, is highly intelligent but perceived as aloof.

Alas, "Slick Rick" stumbled. "Yeah, I stepped in it, man," he told journalists after the disastrous TV debate where he couldn't remember the third federal agency he wants to abolish. (It was the Department of Energy, which among other things handles the United States' nuclear weapons. The Pentagon borrows them from the DOE.) The gaffe extraordinaire follows a speech in New Hampshire where Perry, the governor of Texas, appears drunk. Oops, he said in the TV debate. To paraphrase Britney Spears: Oops, you did it again.

Inevitably, Perry tried to explain the gaffe away. "If anyone's looking for the slickest politician or the smoothest debater, I readily admit I'm not that person," he said. But the public has reacted with scorn — and gallows humor. "The GOP debates are the smash comedy hit of the fall TV schedule," said one. • MWN/EB

WEEKEND, NOVEMBER 11-13, 2011

► Are you ready to roll the dice? Some say the once-a-century 11s event is just another day, while some suggest it offers a pathway to another realm, the mystical world of the Devine.

All 11s: Behind the numbers

- At 11:11:11 on 11/11/11, the time and date will be a perfect palindrome
- Lucky date or worldly portal?

On Friday, Nov. 11, you will experience a moment in time so unique it can only occur once every 100 years.

At the eleventh second of the eleventh minute of the eleventh hour — 11:11:11, 11/11/11 — the time and date will be a perfect same-numbered palindrome, reading the same backwards as forwards. The reason this is so unique is it's the only double-figure palindromic date, since there is no 22nd month.

For some, this date in history is a numerical curiosity that's bound to bring some good luck. For others, the date has a more fateful, mystical tinge to it.

So-called psychic Uri Geller has researched the "11/11" phenomenon and he believes it has a positive meaning. "It's an awakening factor," he told Metro. "It is a portal between two worlds, the mystical realm and us."

For numerologists and their followers, the number 11 signifies a route into the human subconscious. But it can also represent sin, transgression and peril, with 10 being "the perfect

3K+

Over 3,000 couples are flocking to Las Vegas to tie the knot Friday for this once-in-a-lifetime experience.

At least one professor has doubts over the special significance of the date. Eric Carlson, physics professor at Wake Forest University, says there is nothing mystical about 11/11 at all. "It's not a real phenomenon other than psychological," he said. "If we glance at a digital clock at 2:17 we won't notice, whereas we do when we see 11:11. It's called confirmation bias; we remember all the times it works. The brain likes patterns," he told Metro.

Scaremongers seem to be in the minority. Professor Carlson plans to mark the event quietly: "I will order lunch and see if it will be delivered at 11:11 am."

'IT'S ABOUT DUALITY'

Metro spoke with Israeli-born self-professed "mystifier" Uri Geller.

How did you become interested in 11:11?

My eyes started being attracted to 11:11. It was so intense that it surpassed the coincidental factor. I started to believe the phenomenon was tied to some kind of forces in the universe.

How much time did you spend researching 11:11?

Believe it or not I worked on it for 11 months.

Why is the Divine using numbers to communicate?

I believe it's a wake-up call, a pre-encoded code etched into us before we came into matter. The time of completion is near, that's why it's coming up a lot again. It's about duality and your own direct wake-up call.

Many New Yorkers live in tiny spaces, giving us a special appreciation for the grand lobbies and vaulted ceilings of the city's great theaters. New York City Center, hosting audiences for 68 years, just had a complete face-lift costing more than $56 million — including new elevators, more restrooms, a state-of-the-art sprung floor to protect the knees of dancers and a fabulous paint job that restores the neo-Moorish glory of the former Shriners hall.

Also gleaming with fresh talent is the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater.

Performing at City Center for 40 years, and returning for five weeks on Nov. 30, the company recently acquired a new artistic director, only the third in its 53-year history. Robert Battle, whose work has been in the Ailey repertory and will be seen this year, took over in July from Judith Jamison.

Battle, 39, is still in honeymoon mode with the troupe, gleaming with pleasure at his 30 dancers, including nine new ones and returning diva Alicia Graf Mack. He has a flat-screen TV in his office, so he can watch rehearsals even as he tends to his multitude of other duties.

His first season at the helm will display "Home," a new, hip-hop-inflected dance by Rennie Harris that premieres on Dec. 1, World AIDS Day and the 22nd anniversary of the death of Alvin Ailey, the company's founder. Also on tap is Paul Taylor's 1981 "Arden Court," the first piece by the modern-dance master to enter Ailey's repertory. Other company premieres include Ohad Naharin's "Minus 16" and Battle's "Takademe," both from 1999.

RICHARD TERMINO

Spend the holidays with a real-life fairy

► Metro chatted with Megan Fairchild, who plays both the Sugarplum Fairy and Dewdrop in New York City Ballet's production of "The Nutcracker"

How many times have you performed in "The Nutcracker"?
I've been in a "Nutcracker" every year since I was 9, so it's very close to my heart. I'm 27 now, so I guess I've been performing it for nearly two-thirds of my life!

How many roles have you played through the years?
When you're a kid, casting for "The Nutcracker" is all based on height. I started off as a polichinelle (the girls that come out from under Mother Ginger's skirt). Then I went on to do Clara (the equivalent of NYCB's "Marie"), then a soldier,

"All ballet dancers are inherently perfectionists."

then a pageboy, and then several more advanced roles. It was a big deal when I first got to dance Sugarplum Fairy, the lead female role. I was only 19 and a little overwhelmed, but it was really exciting.

How heavy are your costumes?
The Sugarplum Fairy costume doesn't weigh me down at all. I love that green tutu. It's one of the comfiest costumes I have, and I feel very free and very much myself in it. The Spanish costumes are a different story. I danced that role when I was an apprentice in the company, and it's actually hard to get off the floor when you jump because the skirt is so heavy.

What did you think of "Black Swan"?

I loved it. It's a really intense thing that we do, this art form. It can get really emotional and mental, with the stress of performing well in front of a lot of people and competing with the people around you for roles. It's stuff that most dancers don't talk about, but it is part of the culture. I feel like the movie hit it spot on — how hard it is to be a ballet dancer and the pressure people put on themselves. All ballet dancers are inherently perfectionists. But it was exaggerated. Nobody's hallucinating at work or anything. That whole thing had nothing to do with what we do.

"Private Light" has its charms, including five bare-chested young men enthusiastically kissing five women in pointe shoes, manipulating them, and then showing off their own buff bodies. The overlong piece, performed mostly in shadows, features guitarist Christian Kiss playing nine different pieces on three instruments, while dancers skitter around in gray shorts.

Opening night also included dances by Martha Clarke, Robby Barnett and Felix Blaska (their enigmatic 1979 trio "Garden of Villandry") and Twyla Tharp. Tharp's "Sinatra Suite," a reduction of her "Nine Sinatra Songs," was given a jerky performance by Luciana Paris and Herman Cornejo.

The evening's main course, Tharp's 1986 "In the Upper Room," is a bath of symphonic sound (by Philip Glass) and movement, on a stage swathed in glowing smoke, for an ensemble of 13 dancers in either sneakers or bright-red pointe shoes (by designer Norma Kamali). Also on view this week are dances by Paul Taylor and Merce Cunningham — but if you're a fan of Tharp, Kamali and Glass, you won't want to miss the revival of "Upper Room," which is nothing short of heavenly. ELIZABETH ZIMMER

Winter theater: Critic's picks

Winter always means a slew of new show openings But theatergoers aren't limited to the traditional holiday fare Plenty of premiere plays and musicals are gearing up to fill the void between the busy lineup of fall debuts and next year's promising spring schedule Here's a look at the shows we're anticipating that will sate your theater cravings through 2012

'On A Clear Day You Can See Forever'

Starring Harry Connick Jr. in the role of an infatuated psychiatrist, this musical love story offers boatloads of charm and whimsy accompanied by a 19-piece orchestra. For a few hours at least, inside the St. James Theatre, you may just be convinced that your whole world can turn upside-down for the right special someone. Opening Dec. 11. www.onacleardaybroadway.com

'Bonnie & Clyde'

Billed as "Broadway's most-wanted musical," this unconventional romance about one of history's most notorious crime duos is currently in previews and opening Dec. 1. Although released song samples by composer Frank Wildhorn are chillingly reminiscent of his work on the recent flop "Wonderland," we're holding out hope that this one comes together to deliver all the heart-stopping thrill and tragedy of the Bonnie and Clyde storyline we've come to know and love. www.bonnieandclydebroadway.com

'Seminar'

This one offers the big-name pull, notably Alan Rickman ("Harry Potter") and Lily Rabe ("Merchant of Venice"). The cast practically guarantees success even before you get down to the chortle-worthy premise that likely drew these heavyweights to begin with: Reminiscent of last year's "Master Class," produced by MTC, "Seminar" showcases a group of novelists who seek tutelage from a relentless literary luminary (Rickman). Catch it in previews now, with the run officially starting Nov. 20.

www.seminaronbroadway.com

'Stick Fly'

Did you know Alicia Keys has collaborated on a new play? And no, it's not even a musical. That might be all we need to say to pique your interest about this one, but you might also like to know that the show features Dule Hill ("Psych") and Mekhi Phifer ("ER") as brothers competing to show off their new girlfriends to the family during one turbulent weekend on the typically serene Martha's Vineyard. Opening night is Dec. 8. www.stickflybroadway.com

INTRODUCING...FREE LUNCH SWEEPSTAKES

Korean Food Foundation Launches Free Lunch Sweepstakes

Have you ever heard the expression "there's no such thing as a free lunch?" Well, now there is! Now through November 23rd, New Yorkers have a chance to win a catered Korean lunch for 20 people in their office in the Korean Food Foundation's Free Lunch Sweepstakes.

Five winners will be chosen daily and every entry to the Free Lunch giveaway will generate $1.00 to Action Against Hunger — a global humanitarian organization working to save the lives of malnourished children while providing safe access to water and sustainable solutions to hunger.

To enter, visit facebook.com/tasteofkoreanyc.

Lunch deliveries will consist of traditional and contemporary Korean dishes — ranging from bulgogi and japchae to fried chicken and kimchi tofu patties. The food will be prepared by one of nine popular NYC Korean restaurants. This exciting program is an effort to showcase Korean food as a healthy, well-balanced alternative to your usual lunch options. So whether you are looking to try a delicious new cuisine, impress a co-worker or are just strapped for cash, enter the Free Lunch Sweepstakes today and discover Korea's delicious secret.

Visionary Indian director Tarsem Singh is known for his bold visuals — as seen in his previous films "The Cell" and "The Fall" — so a fair amount of spectacle is to be expected for his take on Greek mythology, "Immortals." But the boldest visuals might be the gods themselves, portrayed here as fit, young specimens instead of the usual bearded old men. It's an approach Singh knew would be controversial — though he admits he wasn't prepared for just how much blowback he'd get. When Metro caught up with the outspoken auteur, he had a lot to say about his casting decisions.

Your Greek gods are a lot more fit in this movie than we're used to seeing.

"Immortals" is an action flick, and I decided it wasn't going to be CGI flying and fighting and pointing fingers and lightning coming out from people's fingers. Once I decided I wasn't going to go there, I needed physically fit specimens. So I just said OK, why would I go young with them? And I started to look for reasons, and the reason just being that if you wanted to live forever, nobody wants to look old and miserable and be carrying a catheter around in later-on years.

What did you think of the most recent depiction of the Drama!

Greek mythology is very soap opera-y.

Very! And for most people, they don't see it as that. They're just, "No no no! Zeus was this mighty guy, a voice of reason." The guy who got pissed off at everybody else and kept killing the wrong people? And then slept with so-and-so's daughter, so-and-so's son and everything? And then Poseidon coming down and impregnating people through water? It's just like, no they were nasty f—ups. And basically soap opera is the right thing.

gods in "Clash of the Titans"? "Clash" was unfortunately so hurried in competition, funnily enough, with us — just thinking that it had to come out before that. I said I had no interest in competing with a juggernaut that has three times my budget. If they want to turn something like that out, that's fine. But I don't know how to do gods turning cauldrons and going, "What are the humans up to?" That's so dated.

You also suggest in your film that these gods aren't necessarily all that immortal after all.

In the end, I wanted all gods dead. They're from a dead religion, but people were still like, "No! You can't kill off this one!" And I'm like, "Oh my God, people believe in this?" Just the concept of God I find boring, that everyone thinks of these beneficial bearded guys up there that are doing this nasty stuff.

HEIDI PATALANO

Several rights make a wrong

► Despite an overload of talent behind 'J. Edgar,' the film is uneven and slightly cringe-inducing

Remember the Sean Penn film "All the King's Men"? In the 2006 film, Penn depicted a fictional 1950s politician based on Governor Huey Long of Louisiana. Penn went to great lengths to make his portrayal of this man as accurate as possible. You could almost see the glint of an Oscar statuette in his eyes. Critics and audiences hated it.

Unfortunately, history has repeated itself with Clint Eastwood's further descent to a directorial lull, following last year's flop "Afterlife." The parallels to what made "All the Kings Men" fail are striking in "J. Edgar." First, you have Leo DiCaprio trying so hard to get the FBI chief's every syllable accurately uttered, that he becomes a caricature. Even with layers of makeup — which allowed his face to move about as much as that of a Botox victim — perhaps we know him too well as Leo to buy it.

But the script, written by Oscar winner Dustin Lance Black, also didn't do the film any favors. To be fair, it very touchingly dealt with Hoover's ambiguous sexuality and his lifelong friendship with Clyde Tolson (played by poor Armie Hammer, whose old-age makeup made him look like he'd just stepped off the set of "The Walking Dead"). But all of the fascinating details of Hoover's groundbreaking work are sloppily dealt with in an weakly structured flash-forward, flash-back set up that fails to let the meaning of it all congeal into something substantial.

It just goes to show that even if you put every Oscar winner in the room together, nothing's a sure thing.

'Melancholia' and the infinite sadness

► Kirsten Dunst and Alexander Skarsgard discuss making Lars Von Trier's latest masterpiece ► We couldn't help but ask for 'True Blood' scoop, too

► Happy couple or miserable failure? Alexander Skarsgard and Kirsten Dunst play a couple on their wedding day in "Melancholia," which is in theaters now.

Kirsten Dunst and Alexander Skarsgard would make a very handsome couple, as they do in the new film, "Melancholia." The pair play bride and groom on their wedding day, both desperate to connect to the momentous occasion but failing miserably.

The epic film, which covers everything from this gorgeous wedding to the apocalypse, was directed by controversial auteur Lars Von Trier. Often getting himself into trouble with the media for his remarks — most recently about Nazis at this year's Cannes film festival — Von Trier has also been known to be quite difficult with the talent, famously causing singer Bjork to flee the set of "Dancer in the Dark" due to his erratic behavior.

In an exclusive interview, Metro sat down with the co-stars of his latest work to find out what their on-set experience was like.

Skarsgard talks 'True Blood'

- What he wants to see in Season 5: "I would love to have some flashbacks with Pam and Eric, to see how he turned her into a vampire. I always loved the relationship between Eric and Pam. It's so dysfunctional and weird."
- Which supernatural being could beat his character, Eric Northman, in a fight: "A fairy would have a better chance than a werewolf."
- Does he ever wish his character interacted more with, say, Jason Stackhouse? "Guys like Sam [Trammell], we have one scene in four years. It's weird because we are on the same show and we see each other at premieres or at Comic-Con. But yeah, I would love to work more with them. Those are great guys, so I would love to work with them."

Director Lars Von Trier is notorious for controversial directing techniques. Was there anything unorthodox he did while on set?

Dunst: I think it's going to be taken out of context if I were to say what I wanted to say. I mean, Lars could be a little pervy sometimes but I think that's just because he's Danish.

Skarsgard: I'm Swedish but I'm not offended at all. ... [To Dunst] That's why he likes you so much, because you bite back and he loves that. He does like provoking, but in a funny way. He wants to see emotions and what people will do. So he will be, like, at a very formal dinner, and he will stand up and say, "I am going to masturbate now" and he will see if he can get a reaction. So, he is just curious.

Dunst: It becomes super normal though. After, like, two dinners.

Skarsgard: Yeah, you can jerk off now, Lars.

Why does he always direct films that are supposedly about him but star women?

Dunst: He has a lot of women around him. Well, for the first dinner I had with him, he was shaking. I didn't know his story, and I didn't know if it was medication. I asked, "Lars, are you OK?" I get nervous about him all the time. He will rile me up. He wants to know that he is cared for. And I think he feels more comfortable working with women primarily.

Skarsgard: Then again, I don't think he understands women. He is trying to figure them out, and so he writes amazing parts for them, because that is kind of like his process of trying to understand them.

Dunst: Well, that is a male's perspective and you have the female's perspective.

Confused by Competing Churches and Conflicting Doctrines?

Just Read the Bible:

"...endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. There is one body and one Spirit ... one hope ... one Lord ... one faith ... one baptism, one God and Father..."

Ephesians 4:3-6

Not only can you understand Christ's teaching, you can find unity with others who simply take the word of God, nothing more and nothing less. The key is to begin and end with the word of God. If we can help you in your search for spiritual truth, contact or visit the UWM Church of Christ:

Film reviews

'Jack and Jill'

Genre: Comedy

Director: Dennis Dugan

Stars: Adam Sandler, Katie Holmes

Rating: PG

Grade: C+

Adam Sandler's first go at playing dual roles goes about as well as you'd expect. Sandler plays both Jack, the insensitive jerk that's become his go-to character of late, and his own annoying and overly-sensitive sister Jill. When not mining the gender-bending for laughs, the film leans hard on sight gags and toilet humor, but is ultimately saved by a slew of celebrity cameos and a stand-out performance from Al Pacino playing himself as Jill's paramour.

► Adam Sandler may do double duty in "Jack and Jill," but guess what? He's half as funny.

some Roman soldiers against a few gods and most people will leave reasonably happy. Yet, director Tarsem Singh insists on breaking up short action sequences with long passages of stilted dialogue delivered by over-serious actors, killing the film's momentum. Singh framed some nice shots, but "Immortals" can't even deliver on the most basic level. IAN GORMELY

Weekend recipe

Mexican pecan pie

Nonstick cooking spray

- 1½ cups graham cracker or Maria cookie crumbs
- 12 tablespoons (1½ sticks) unsalted butter, plus 7 tablespoons, melted
- ½ cup plus 2 tablespoons (packed) light brown sugar
- 6 tablespoons corn syrup
- 3 cups pecan halves
- ¼ cup Mexican crema or heavy cream
- 1 disc Mexican chocolate or 3 ounces bittersweet chocolate, finely chopped

- 1 Spray a 9-inch pie dish with cooking spray.
- 2 Process the cookie crumbs, 7 tablespoons melted butter, and 2 tablespoons of the brown sugar in a food processor until the crumbs are moist. Press the crumb mixture into the bottom and up the sides of the pie dish. Cover and freeze while preparing the filling (or for up to 1 week).

- 3 Preheat the oven to 350°F.
- 4 Combine the 12 tablespoons butter, remaining ¼ cup brown sugar and the corn syrup in a heavy medium saucepan. Bring to a boil over medium-high heat, stirring often. Boil for 1 minute. Stir in the pecans and crema. Boil until the mixture thickens slightly, about 3 minutes. Remove from the heat, add the chocolate and stir until melted and smooth.
- 5 Pour the hot filling into the crust. Using a spoon, evenly distribute the nuts. Bake until the filling bubbles all over, about 15 minutes. Transfer pie to a rack and cool.

The feed ...

On Fridays, Dorothy will post the best tweets she received during the week. You can always let her know what you think — good or bad — at @dorothyatmetro.

Big week for The Word on Twitter. @Blaquestarr lets me know that calling Phylicia Rashad and Jason Alexander "mid-level" in Thursday's Mariah Carey column was not OK. @Capomaestro1 writes in about the Conrad Murray trial, @cardiff_flyer sends some love and @vOxtheriot responds to Monday's column about Snooki's new perfume. And, on a personal note, readers responded after I announced my first pregnancy the same day Michelle Duggar announced her 20th. She got on "Today" ... I got on Twitter.

▶ @Blaquestarr Um Phylicia Rashad is definitely NOT a "mid-level" celeb. More like an icon. Jason Alexander as well.

▶ @Capomaestro1 I heard that the jails are so overcrowd in L.A. That he may not serve a day. The good side is that he will lose his license.

▶ @cardiff_flyer I get the Times every morning but always read The Word first. You make my morning all the time. Thx ▶ @vOxtheriot so this new perfume by snooki is gonna smell like sweaty guys and alcohol, am i right?

▶ @VitaminRi congratulations!! maybe you'll have a future writer for the next generation!

▶ @dgambacorta Congratulations! As a father of two, I can tell you that the nervous twitch you'll develop is only semi-permanent.

Kutcher surrenders his Twitter account

The man who was one of Twitter's biggest early adopters — if not the guy who single-handedly launched its popularity — is now surrendering his account. On Wednesday night, Ashton Kutcher attacked the Penn State Board of Trustees on Twitter for firing their football coach, Joe Paterno. "How do you fire Jo Pa? #insult #noclass as a hawk-eye fan I find it in poor taste," Kutcher wrote.

Kutcher apparently didn't know the scope of the Penn State scandal, in which Paterno is said to have covered up the alleged sexual abuse of young boys by former defensive coordinator Jerry Sandusky. Kutcher's followers vehemently responded that they found his tweet to be in poor taste. Kutcher tried to backtrack by writing "Heard Joe was fired, fully recant previous tweet! Didn't have full story. #admit whenYoumake mistakes." He later tweeted, "This is an insane story, I just heard paterno was fired, getting the rest of the story now... Wow." He added, "As an advocate in the fight against child sexual exploitation, I could not be more remorseful for all involved in the Penn St. case."

He added, "As an advocate in the fight against child sexual exploitation, I could not be more remorseful for all involved in the Penn St. case."

Kutcher

It's enough of a gaff that now Kutcher doesn't trust himself with his own Twitter account. He announced on his blog yesterday that he is turning over control of his @Aplusk account — and his 8 million followers — to his management.

He writes, "While I will continue to express myself through @Aplusk I'm going to turn the management of the feed over to my team at Katalyst Media to ensure the quality of its content."

So not only has this Penn State controversy brought one of America's biggest and most prestigious football programs to its knees, it also brought down a celebrity's Twitter empire. This scandal just keeps growing.

Bieber auctions off his Johnson

No, not that Johnson. (You dirty-minded readers, you!) Justin Bieber is parting with his pet snake, but it's all for charity, according to People magazine. The pop star hopes to earn cash for the charity Pencils for Promise when he puts his baby Boa constrictor — named Johnson — up for grabs on www.charitybuzz.com. The snake's value is estimated at $1,000. "It'll get, like, four feet. It's gonna get big," Bieber told Entertainment Weekly of the snake, which he debuted at the Video Music Awards in August.

Rourke gives advice for Lohan

If anyone knows how much damage Lindsay Lohan can do to her career with her behavior, it's Mickey Rourke. And the outspoken actor has some simple advice for the troubled starlet: "Get your sleep and eat right and just keep on going," he tells Hollyscoop. his career, but he reserves most of the blame for himself. "The reputation I had for 20 years about being difficult and unprofessional is always going to stay. A lot of it was true, but I'm not really that way anymore," he tells Reuters. "I don't blame anybody else but myself. I can't make the same mistakes again. I'd be foolish."

Holmes to go back to 'Creek'?

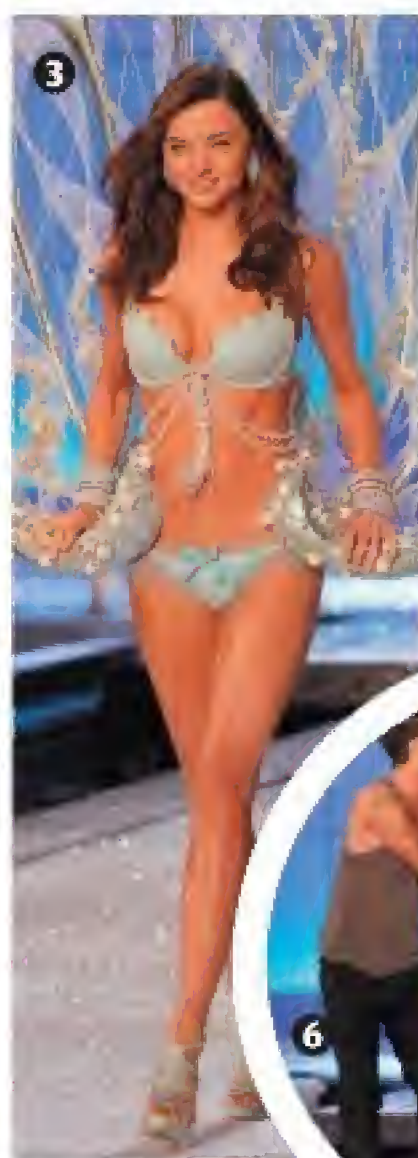

Katie Holmes got her start on TV's "Dawson's Creek," and she's happy to return if a reunion were organized, she tells Good Morning America. "It would be fun," Holmes says of a potential reunion. "I had so much fun working on that show and I loved everyone so much and I think about it with such fond memories." Holmes isn't alone. Co-star Michelle Williams is still grateful for the hit show that started her career. "It lifted me out of Los Angeles and placed me until I was 22 in a sleepy Southern town," Williams says, according to MSN. "It was the best acting class, learning to hit your mark, absorb your lines. I feel indebted to it, and if there was ever a reunion show, sign me up."

Morgan to leave 'America's Got Talent'

Piers Morgan is paring down his projects, choosing to leave his gig as a judge on "America's Got Talent" after six seasons, he announced on Twitter. Morgan is choosing to devote his energy to his new job on CNN, where he took over for Larry King earlier this year. "Turned out that juggling's harder than it looks, so I'm going to focus on CNN," he tweeted. Morgan gave up his post on "Britain's Got Talent" last year after moving to CNN.

she looked amazing in the Very Sexy corset and feather wings during the "I Put A Spell On You" segment of the show.

3. During the "Angels Aquatic" segment, new mom, Miranda Kerr (who shed the baby weight faster than you can say "cray") modeled the centerpiece of the show — the $2.5 million Fantasy Treasure bra — along with a pair of shell wings. But let's face it: All eyes were on her flawless post-baby bod.

4. Angel Erin Heatherton strutted down the runway in a cropped sequined hoodie by Club Pink and a yellow tutu as Nicki Minaj performed her hit "Super Bass."

5. Clad in a ballerina-inspired set, Angel Candice Swanepoel opened the show by walking through a troupe of ballet dancers.

6. Adam Levine showed the crowd his Jagger-like moves before serenading his girlfriend, Russian supermodel Anne Vyalitsyna. The couple held hands and walked down the runway together.

Starve the beast, feed the rich?

"HOW THE GOP BECAME THE PARTY OF THE RICH," ROLLINGSTONE.COM, NOV. 9. As Americans gather en masse to protest a dizzying array of social concerns, many have asked, "Why?" "Why not," these people wonder, "sort this out as gentlemen — in the voting booth?" And, reasonably: "What possible good can come of huddling in the cold, banging those dang drums?" (Opposition to OWS, it seems, is strictly anti-percussionist.)

Good questions, and important ones. Let's take a second to investigate what may have led thousands of individuals to sacrifice their comforts in service of this uncertain movement.

This week Rolling Stone reported on how Republican politicians have over the past 40 years transferred wealth from the lower classes up to the richest .01 percent via an unceasing policy of regressive tax cuts. One frightening conservative strategy, known as "Starve the Beast," inspires lawmakers to bankrupt the Treasury as a means of forcing cuts to otherwiseuntouchable entitlement programs such as Social Security. (Get ready.)

Of course, this is only half the problem, for in this great nation we have been blessed with two political parties. Angry citizens have only one possible recourse against GOP intransigence — which makes the Democrat Party, to borrow a phrase from Churchill, the worst form of government except all the others. Hardly inspirational.

When people feel powerless — when they feel that no choice is a good choice, that the political system is actively working against their interests — people take to the streets. Living closely with other frustrated humans can help warm the body and soul.

Oh, and the drums? They just pass the time.

Horoscope

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Should conflicting opinions between you and your mate become a bit trying, remember that minor concessions and a few affectionate hugs could easily restore a common bond.
♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Some kind of task you take on that you thought would be as easy as 1-2-3 is likely to turn out to be much more difficult. Regroup and try again, but be prepared to take it to 4-5-6.
♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Generally, you're pretty good at managing your resources, but this may not be a good day to do so. To be on the safe side, enlist a friend to help.
♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Instead of getting down to business when time means money, you could allow yourself to be dragged off course. Playing catch-up later on may prevent you from accomplishing goals.
♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Without thinking, sometimes you can end up being more of a talker than a doer. All your good intentions could be useless if you allow this to happen.
♈ Aries March 21-April 19. More investigation than you suspect may be needed before you get involved in a new endeavor. Take plenty of time to examine everything that needs checking.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Success is important to you, but it shouldn't come at all costs. Think of your reputation and how you could possibly alienate others whom you may need down the line.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Don't depend too heavily upon chance or luck to achieve your goals; rely only on yourself. Achievement is possible, but you must be consistent.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. It can always be tempting to blame our mistakes on someone else, but it only makes matters worse in the long run. Fessing up to your errors will win you admirers.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Be wary of jumping to conclusions before you have all the necessary facts. Once all the information gets out in the open, you might have to make an embarrassing apology.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Because of one hasty judgment call, you might spend just as much time placating co-workers as you do trying to be productive. To avoid trouble, think before you act.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. If you allow expediency to govern your actions, any hasty moves could cause you further delays. Careful action brings about desirable results, while erratic ones create havoc.

Moving off seven is massive

There are two key numbers in football betting. It doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure out those are three and seven.

Since so many NFL games are decided by those two numbers, bookmakers are very aware of them.

If they open a game at 7.5 and it goes to 6.5, they open themselves up to a huge loss. That's because the people that took the dog at +7.5 have a good chance to win — and the other side does, too.

So when a book moves a line off of seven, we know there is something going on. And we see that in the Ravens at Seahawks game, which opened at Ravens -7 and is now Ravens -6.5.

If we shop around, we can find Seahawks +7 and Seahawks +6.5. By taking both sides, we risk little and get to go for a big payday. ADAM LEVITAN

The cold, hard

football facts

A look at this weekend's NFL action through the eyes of the football stat experts at coldhardfootballfacts.com.

Stats point to

Packers repeat

NFL teams win championships when they dominate through the air. Simply look at Passer Rating Differential, which subtracts a team's Defensive Passer Rating from its Offensive Passer Rating. We call it the "mother of all stats" because 60 percent of NFL champions since 1940 were No. 1 or No. 2 in PRD.

The 8-0 Packers are on pace for the second-best PRD since 1966 (the Super Bowl era). Here's a look at the top 10 since then (nonstrike years). Teams in bold won the Super Bowl.

1. 1966 Packers (+56.0 PRD, 12-2 record)
2. 2011 Packers (+47.0, 8-0)
3. 1989 49ers (+46.3, 14-2)
4. 1975 Vikings (+44.6, 12-2)
5. 1975 Steelers (+43.9, 12-2)
6. 1994 49ers (+43.3, 13-3)
7. 1999 Rams (+42.5, 13-3)
8. 1975 Bengals (+42.1, 11-3)
9. 1976 Lions (+40.9, 6-8)
10. 1996 Pack (+40.3, 13-3)

FFchamps.com's

'Start and Sit'

Start him

Denver RB Willis McGahee might be 30, but this Bronco is a long way from the glue factory. He's averaged 103 rushing yards over his six starts, with a high of 163 last week against Oakland.

Sit him

Bucs RB LeGarrette Blount is running hard, but his production has been greatly compromised by Tampa Bay being forced to throw a lot while in catch-up mode. And they're almost always in catch-up mode.

It doesn't get any bigger than Sunday

► Prime-time matchup has the potential to alter the season for Patriots, Jets ► A month ago, New York was reeling ► Now, New England is down

It's amazing what one month can do.

It was just about that long ago when the Jets came to town, losers of two in a row, with reports of the team imploding.

There were arguments between teammates. There was frustration with team production and results. It seemed like Rex Ryan was losing grip on his cast of characters — Antonio Cromartie, Plaxico Burress and Bart Scott, to name a few.

Of course, New York lost to the Patriots, dropping to 2-3 on the season. Immediately, they "just weren't that good" and "didn't do enough in the offseason" to remain legitimate contenders.

New England, on the other hand, improved to 4-1, and things were looking up. Wes Welker was on a historic pace, and Tom Brady's offense was good enough to overcome a terrible defense.

Now fast forward to Nov. 11.

It's the Patriots, not the Jets, who are reeling going into the rematch. Back-to-back losses to the Steelers and Giants have shown that a well-rounded opponent can easily ex-plot New England's defense — and stop their offense just enough times. In a copy-cat league like the NFL, the blueprint may just be out on stopping the "juggernaut" in Foxborough.

► The Jets hope this week goes much better than their Oct. 9 meeting with New England.

With failed draft picks, poor offseason signings and a team that seems to have lost its mojo, the Patriots are in danger of losing their third game in a row for the first time since 2002.

Ryan challenged the rest of the league to beat the Pats this season. Three teams have done it.

Ryan is going to do his all to become the fourth. Bill Belichick is going to make sure that doesn't happen.

Consider Week 10 a season-altering one.

Patriots at Jets (8:20 p.m. Sunday)

LINE: Jets -1
(O/U 47.5)

KEY INJURIES: WR Plaxico Burress (back) questionable. RB Joe McKnight (toe) questionable. S Brodney Pool (knee) questionable. S Patrick Chung (foot) questionable. LB Brandon Spikes (knee) questionable. THE SCOOP: You can throw out the line with it so close. It's basically a pick 'em. The Jets are riding a hot streak coming in; the Pats are doing just the opposite. The game will depend heavily on injuries. If Plaxico Burress plays, it's hard not to like the Jets. He is uncoverable in the end zone. Right now, it looks like he'll play. We'll go with the hot team evening up the season series.

► Week 10: New York Giants at 49ers, Candlestick Park
► When: Sunday, 4:15 p.m., FOX5 ► Next: vs. Eagles

1 Gore, Gore and more Gore

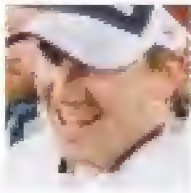

The main thing to look for in this game will be Frank Gore — a lot of Frank Gore.

The 49ers make no secret that they utilize Gore to the fullest. He's their best — and some say only — offensive weapon. Gore has had a great season so far, posting 782 yards, 4.9 yards per carry and five scores. He is the backbone of an offense that would rather not put the onus on quarterback Alex Smith. He's having a career season, but his past makes the Niners faithful weary.

The Niners will look to pound a suddenly suspect Giants run defense.

2 Eli's coming, hide your cornerbacks

Eli Manning is the hottest quarterback not named Aaron Rodgers and will look to keep it rolling against a very steady 49ers defense.

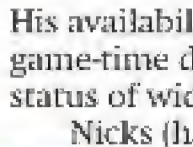

It'll be a tough task, because Manning hasn't had the luxury of his counterpart Alex Smith, who has a premier running game behind him.

Look for the Giants to implement a pass-heavy scheme to offset their inconsistent rushing attack. Manning was a turnover machine last season, but has been very judicious this season.

3 Will the injuries ever end?

The health of the Giants will also have a huge influence on the outcome.

Running back Ahmad Bradshaw is having a bad statistical year and to compound that he's also been banged up with a foot injury.

His availability will be a game-time decision. The status of wideout Hakeem Nicks (hamstring) shouldn't be as secretive. He's slated to give it a go, but his effectiveness will be a mystery until the game starts.

Niners still look to earn respect

Despite taking differing routes to their stellar records, both the Giants and 49ers still have this nagging feeling that their combined 13-3 record doesn't garner the necessary respect.

The Niners' ascension may be the league's biggest surprise. They have a rookie head coach in Jim Harbaugh and a quarterback, who despite having a career season, was thought to be a lame duck in Alex Smith.

Just don't count any of the Giants as nonbelievers.

"We respect them because we know it's hard to go 7-1 in this league and play at the level they're playing right now. They're a great football team that's well coached with a lot of talent," said running back Brandon Jacobs. "Take nothing away from them [because] they've earned everything they've gotten. They've beaten teams we've beaten and they're legit."

"I'm not going to overhype this, but they're a good team [and] we have to step it up because they're a sound and physical team," Boley said.

Stadium hosts battle of Knights

In Saturday's game against Army at Yankee Stadium, Rutgers head coach Greg Schiano will play without his prized recruit, freshman running back Savon Huggins.

In Saturday night's comeback win over South Florida, Huggins suffered a knee injury and will miss the final three games of the season, though he could return for a bowl game.

"I mean, we're going to miss Savon, for sure. But that's why you have a program. You have some depth and you keep playing," Schiano said. "We've just got to make sure we've got plans if another guy goes down, how we'll attack it and all those things."

UFC comes to network TV

The Ultimate Fighting Championship's spectacular evolution into mainstream sport status will continue Saturday night when UFC Heavyweight champion Cain Velasquez meets No. 1 contender Junior Dos Santos in a fight that will air on Fox.

The fight marks UFC's debut on network television.

"This is a throwback to the old days of boxing," UFC president Dana White said. "We are putting a big fight — a huge fight — on free TV to expose this thing to a new audience.

Our goal has always been to bring big fights back to network television. We are thinking long-term for the future of this sport."

Velasquez, the reigning UFC heavyweight champion, is 9-0-0 in his MMA career. Eight of his nine wins have come by TKO, including a first round devastation of then-champ Brock Lesnar at UFC 121.

Dos Santos has won 13 of his 14 professional fights.
